

Topic: Imagine a Great City: Denver at 150
Facilitator: Bill Convery
Sessions: Tuesday, December 2, 2008
Time: 7-9 p.m.
Cost: $35 per person

This fall, the Colorado Historical Society will mark Denver's 150th anniversary with the exhibit, Imagine a Great City: Denver at 150. Join the Humanities Institute for an exclusive private tour of the exhibit as we re-visit Denver's earliest days as a mining camp and frontier town, explore unique neighborhoods that grew and changed with the city, and delve behind-the-scenes of civic projects and social movements that defined Denver, then and now. We'll learn more about the distinctive people, places, and events that are hallmarks of Denver's past. Whether you are a Denver native or a "transplant," don't miss this exciting opportunity to learn about our city's rich and fascinating history.

Bill Convery joined the Colorado Historical Society as the state historian in April 2008. A fourth-generation Coloradoan, he has a long relationship with the Historical Society, previously serving as associate curator for newspapers, a researcher for the historic markers program, and a presenter for the Society's tours and treks.
